THE SECOND ANNUAL NATIONAL CONGRESS ON HEALTH CARE COMPLIANCE

At the First National Congress on Health Care Compliance held February 25-27, 1998 in Washington, D.C., over 1,000 registrants, 100 faculty and 40 cosponsoring organizations came together to study and debate the major health care enforcement and compliance issues of our time. The Congress, with presentations from the nation's preeminent health care compliance regulators, attorneys, consultants and compliance professionals and its unique compliance video collection approach, received universally high registrant ratings.

Over the past year, the pace of health care enforcement initiatives and responsive compliance efforts has continue to increase. A number of prominent qui tam cases have been unsealed. Numerous large health care enterprises, both investor-owned and nonprofit, have entered into substantial monetary settlements and executed corporate integrity agreements. National publications, such as the New York Times and the Wall Street Journal, continue to make health care compliance front page news.

The Second Annual National Congress on Health Care Compliance has been convened to encourage a continuing national dialogue on the ongoing governmental and private sector enforcement initiatives sweeping health care finance and delivery. The nation's leading health care regulators and prosecutors from the Department of Health and Human Services, the Federal Bureau of Investigation, the Health Care Financing Administration, the Federal Trade Commission, the Securities and Exchange Commission, various United States Attorneys General's Offices and the Department of Justice will describe in detail current and future health care enforcement initiatives. Leading compliance professionals, including attorneys, consultants and compliance officers, will articulate responsive strategies and share benchmarks for best practices compliance programs.

WHO SHOULD ATTEND THE CONGRESS

- Health Care senior executives and leaders, including CEOs and CFOs in hospitals, medical groups and IPAs, ancillary providers, long term care organizations and health plans
- Members of the Board of Trustees of Health Care Enterprises
- Health Care Compliance Officers
- Health Care Risk Managers
- Health Care Finance, Patient Accounts, Coding, and Billings Specialists
- Physicians and Other Health Professionals
- Health Care Consultants and Attorneys
- Health Care Regulators
- Health Care Journalists, Researchers and Policy Makers

SPECIAL FEATURES OF THE CONGRESS

To address the special needs and requests of registrants, the Congress will include the following special events and features:

Extensive Written Materials

The faculty of the Congress will prepare written materials to accompany their presentations, including copies of presentation overheads and related materials which will be included with the Congress binder. Additionally, sample compliance publications and related documentation will be shared with registrants.

Unique Video Presentations

The Congress has become renowned for its use of press conference and news videos covering major health care enforcement and compliance events, investigations and prosecutions. Often used in transitions between plenary session speakers, these video presentations highlight recent major health care compliance developments.

National Health Care Compliance Banquet and Annual Regulator Roast

On the evening of Wednesday, February 10, 1999, HCCA will host its National Health Care Compliance Banquet featuring the noted academic authority on health care enforcement and compliance issues, Malcolm K. Sparrow, Ph.D., of the Kennedy School of Government at Harvard University.

HCCA's Annual Regulator Roast will follow, featuring a roast of one of the nation's preeminent health care fraud prosecutors, James Sheehan, Esq., Assistant U.S. Attorney General of the Eastern District of Pennsylvania.

A Special Symposium on Health Care Qui Tam

Increasingly, federal and state health care enforcement initiatives are growing out of private "whistleblower" or qui tam actions under the federal False Claims Act. The False Claims Act imposes liability on persons or corporations who make fraudulent claims for payment on the United States Government. It was originally enacted during the Civil War in an effort to deter corrupt military contractors. For over a century, defense contractors remained the primary targets of the statute.

The Attorney General is primarily responsible for bringing False Claims Act cases. She is required by the terms of the Act to investigate violations "diligently." However, the False Claims Act also allows a private citizen to bring a civil suit on behalf of the United States. Such suits are known as qui tam or "whistleblower" actions. The qui tam provisions of the False Claims Act are intended to encourage all persons with information about fraud against the government to come forward. A successful private plaintiff in a qui tam suit, called a “relator,” is entitled to a share of the recovery as well as reimbursement of the costs of bringing a suit.

There has been a tremendous increase in the number of qui tam lawsuits filed against health care providers. Ten years ago, less than ten percent of qui tam recoveries were from health care related actions; by 1995, nearly half of the recoveries came from these cases. In less than a decade, the number of whistleblower cases has gone from 50 to over 300 filed annually, with two-thirds of recent cases being brought against health care defendants. Law firms that specialize in representing qui tam plaintiffs have taken to advertising in health care industry publications in an effort to locate would-be relators.

This new wave of cases involves more than obvious false claims, such as billing Medicare for services that were never rendered. Coding errors and overbilling now give rise to whistleblower suits. Indeed, qui tam suits are being filed in a number of areas that arguably should not fall within the False Claims Act, including violations of Medicare anti-kickback regulations, failure to provide adequate care to Medicare patients, and failure to comply with Medicare manual provisions relating to billing.

The Congress will offer a special focused symposium on qui tam on the morning of Friday, February 12, 1999. Featured will be the nation’s top qui tam plaintiffs and defense counsel and a panel of qui tam relators, the actual whistleblowers in some preeminent recent qui tam cases.

Advanced Compliance Training for Executives and Board Members

The Congress features a focused multi-session advanced training course on compliance matters for health care executives and members of boards of directors. Compliance officers may wish to invite and accompany key executives and board members to this valuable course of compliance study. Taught by the nation’s leading compliance consultants, attorneys and compliance officers, the course will cover the following topics:

- Required Commitment and Key Actions in Establishment and Implementation of a Corporate Compliance Plan
- Structure, Organization and Funding of Corporate Compliance Plans
- Liability, Fiduciary Duties and Personal Obligations of Executives and Board Members
- Working with Your Corporate Compliance Officer
- Maintaining Focus—Ongoing Functions and Commitments
